From 19th to 31st August, 1923, the following lecture-course was given by Rudolf Steiner at a Summer School in Penmaenmawr, North Wales, organized by the Anthropological Society in Great Britain. The lectures were divided into three sections, each being immediately and brilliantly interpreted into English by George Adams. Verbatim reports were also made by an experienced stenographer and the present translation has been based on these reports. It must, however, be remembered that Rudolf Steiner constantly emphasised the distinction between his written works and reports of lectures which were given as oral communications and not originally intended for print. The titles of the lectures are in themselves indications of the many aspects of Initiation-knowledge presented-knowledge "leading over from the world of the senses to the supersensible."
