El Doble (Spanish Edition) Fedor Dostoyevski

El Doble es la segunda novela escrita por Fedor Dostoiewski, (después de Pobres Gentes), escrita en y publicada el 30 de enero de 1846 y publicada en Anales Patrios. Posteriormente fue reeditada y republicada por Dostoiewski en 1866. No tuvo una gran acogida, pues se la vio como un intento mal logrado de copiar a Nikolai Gógol, ya que ambos trataban el tema de un funcionario público golpeado por la maquinaria del estado y la alta sociedad. En esta novela corta de Dostoievski se pueden presentir rasgos en su protagonista, Yakov Petrovich Goliadkin, de futuros personajes memorables del escritor ruso. La trama es sencilla: Goliadkin es un funcionario disciplinado, pero arribista, que entra en contacto un día con un hombre que es idéntico a él. En principio, se gana su amistad, el compañero entra a trabajar en su departamento; pero enseguida este 'doble' suyo comienza a engatusar a los superiores de Goliadkin, a poner en entredicho a su valedor y, finalmente, a provocar su caída en desgracia. La historia va mucho más allá de lo que resumen las anteriores líneas, pues Dostoievski se anticipa unos cuantos años a la novela psicológica para presentarnos un personaje que ve desdoblada su personalidad ante la escisión de sus deseos personales, al más puro estilo Kafka. El doble de Goliadkin representa sus frustraciones, sus anhelos y sus vicios, pero desatados y sin ningún pudor; se comporta como él nunca haría, por educación o imperativos morales o sociales: a veces con decisión y firmeza, otras con subterfugios y trampas.
