A Revelation to the Church Stephen Popp

A Revelation to the Church: A Call for the Endurance and Faith of the Saints by Stephen Popp presents commentary and criticism on the book of Revelation and its purpose, intended audience, and message to the Christian church. His discussion of the book of Revelation centers on the premise that it was written to, for, and about the church. With biblical support and scholarly research from a historical and religious perspective, the author walks the reader through the book of Revelation and proves that it was written with the church in mind as an audience and beneficiary. Stephen E. Popp even exposes the weaknesses of the theology that rejects the premise that the book of Revelation was written to, for, and about the church. Laying a foundation of understanding for the study of eschatology as understood in the book of Revelation, Stephen E. Popp builds a comprehensive argument that church members, leaders, and pastors will appreciate.
