Sergeant Peter “Pete” Jericho, a U.S. Marine veteran finds himself in combat, both physically and spiritually. Over the past year, situations have caused his prayer life to weaken and the bonds of his once-solid marriage to unravel.

Just before being shipped to Iraq to fight in the ongoing war, Pete allowed an unresolved personal conflict to spiral out of control and tear his family apart, resulting in the relocation of his wife (Janet) and daughter (Kyla) to Atlanta, Georgia to live with his cankerous, holier-than-thou mother-in-law (Leona) in an infamous community called Shelton Heights.

Although Pete makes a promise to his young daughter that he will mend things between her mother and him upon his return to the States, he is blindsided by yet another misfortune when he is captured as a prisoner of war less than a month before his tour of duty ends.

His mounting personal calamity, coupled with the death and destruction all around him, puts Pete’s already waning faith to the ultimate test. He finds himself in the battle of a lifetime as he struggles to somehow survive the devices of his murderous captors, and not only regain his place in God, but also return to his wife and daughter.
