Visions of Nature is a coloring book based on real photographs of real places around the United States. Each drawing was converted into a line image from a color photo. This isn't your typical "fill in the lines" coloring book. Because the images are based on photos, the lines are not distinct in each image. This allows you to use your creativity to create images that are completely your own. This book is divided into five different types of landscape images: the forest, waterfalls, rivers and streams, mountains, and the desert. Visit the author's webpage to see each original image and more information about each image. We also provide examples of how to color many of the images. Because of the complex nature of the images, we recommend that you use colored pencil with this book. We hope you enjoy experiencing some of the most beautiful places in the United States through the pages of this book. Enjoy!
