Rich. Powerful. Sexy.

Never a good combination when found in a man - and Ian Stirling, publisher of the Daily Herald, possesses all of them in excess.

Merideth Gardner leaves her interview at the Daily Herald ready to give up on her dream of working for a daily city paper when fate intervenes. All she has to do is help Ian convince his grandfather that he's given up his philandering ways.

Seven days. She only has to pretend she's in love with Ian for seven days. And on the seventh day she'll get her prize - a place on the features desk.

It's a simple business transaction. An exchange of services. But then the story changes and Merideth finds herself doing the one thing she knows she can't do - she falls for Ian.

Will Ian go on the record with his feelings for Merideth? Or is their relationship destined to be off the record?
